The Chicago Tribune.

VOL. 23. CHICAGO, SUNDAY, JANUARY 23, 1870.—WITH SUPPLEMENT. NUMBER 207.

WASHINGTON.

Speeches in the House in Favor of Removing the National Capital.

The Woman Suffrage Movement in the District of Columbia.

Fat Tenders in Relation to the Salt Trade.

SPRINGFIELD.

Congratulations and Resolutions Introduced in the Convention.

Further Debate on the Printing Committee's Report.

Reports of Committees.

NEW YORK.

FOREIGN.

Sentence of Fine and Imprisonment Imposed on Rochefort.

Proceedings in the Ecumenical Council.

THE WEST.

STATE LEGISLATURES.

KENTUCKY.

MISSOURI

CANADA.

DRY GOODS.

DRY GOODS.

139 LAKE-ST.

GREAT REDUCTION

In Prices of DRY GOODS to close stock of Winter Goods.

Blankets, Flannels, Cloths, Cloakings, Dress Goods, Silks, Shawls, Cloaks, &c.

FROM

10 to 20 Per Cent

Cheaper than any House in Chicago.

My Spacious salesroom is devoted to a very large lot of

Black Poplin Alpacas,

Purchased at an Importer's Assignee Sale, which we are selling at 40 cts. per yard, worth 75 cents.

1,000 PAIRS

PARIS KIDS,

Reduced from $1 to 80 cts. per pair.

2,500 PAIRS

Best Quality French Kids

Reduced from $1.50 to $1 per pair.

GOODKIND & MANNHEIMER

139 LAKE-ST.

COAL AND WOOD.

COAL.

Best Briar Hill and Erie Coals

At $8 per Ton,

Delivered in any part of the city.

ROHRBACH & CO.,

YARDS:

No. 19 Rivers-st., and Halsted-st. Bridge, North Branch.

Mt. Sterling, Pennsylvania.

CANNEL COAL.

The Best American Gas Fuel.

We desire to call the attention of the public to the fact that we are the only dealers in Chicago who handle the Genuine Mt. Sterling Cannel Coal. It is the Cleanest and Most Economical Coal ever introduced here.

For sale at our yards, corner of Rivers and Halsted-sts. Bridge, North Branch, and at our office, 139 Lake-st., where we are prepared to be selling in commencing this Month.

It is reported that the chairs has recovered in Spain.

Chicago has obtained since Saturday 7 inches less the coal for the Monday, during which time the mercury stood at zero.

A grand procession of vehicles in Havana and Matanzas on the 8th inst. celebrated the birth of Gen. U. Grant.

DYER & PAYNE,

North End Rush-st. Bridge.

MORRIS COAL CO.

Will now sell the Best Coal at $8.50 Per Ton,

Screened and Delivered.

Yards, foot of Rush-st. Bridge, and foot of Wood-st., Chicago.

Also, at the Canal Basin at Lemont, and at Morris, Ill.

COAL.

The undersigned will sell for the next thirty days Coal at $8 per ton, delivered, in any part of the city.

D. COLE & SON.

Office and Yard No. 39 West Chicago-av., Yard 426 Canal-st.

WOOD AND COAL.

I am prepared to deliver the best quality of hard wood, dry, cut and split, at $7 per cord. Also, the best quality of Cannel Coal, at $8 per ton, delivered in any part of the city.

RICHARD DUNNE.

HAIR GOODS.

THE JAPAN SWITCH CO.

Have established an Agency for their Switches at 79 Lake-st., Chicago.

These are not Braids, but made of the hair of the head.

DENTISTRY.

GREAT REDUCTION

In Dental Fees.

The day of high prices is past. Gold and all other articles used in the practice of Dentistry have greatly declined in price, and I regard it but just that the public should reap the benefit of such reduction. I therefore announce the following reduced rates for the future, and reductions in our fees will be made in our estimates:

	old rates.	now.
Gold Fillings	3 to $5	$2 to $3
Silver Cement, do	2 to 3	1.50 to 2
Best Mineral Teeth	10	7
Best by the Set	150	100
Gum Teeth, per tooth	5	3
Set of Teeth on Gold Plate	75	50
Set of Teeth on Rubber	50	35
Best Sets on Gold (per tooth)	4 to 5	3 to 4
Best Sets on Silver	3 to 4	2 to 3

N.B.—Gold Fillings, Gum Teeth, and Best Sets on Gold (per tooth) will be charged extra.

H. W. TOWNE, Dentist,

No. 68 Washington-st.

J. WARD ELLIS,

DENTIST,

No. 68 Washington-st.

PRICES FOR DENTISTRY.

Gold Gold Fillings ..... $1 to $3

Artificial Teeth, per set, (very best) 100

Charges reduced.

H. W. TOWNE, Dentist,

No. 68 Washington-st.

CONFECTIONERY.

CANDY HERESY.

Under this caption Rev. Henry Ward Beecher publishes in the New York Ledger, to which he contributes an occasional paper for consideration by the candy and confectionery trade, a long communication. Mr. Beecher expends most of his space in denouncing the use of "glucose" in the manufacture of candy, and exhorting in its behalf the consumers of this article to demand pure candy. He argues lustily that good candy is simply good sugar, with which no other substance should be mixed of food; in short, he vigorously advocates pure, unadulterated food. He says: "Confectioners must make pure candy or healthful and beautiful candy respectively. As manufacturers are responsible to their customers, we call the attention of the public to Mr. Beecher's article, and avail ourselves of the opportunity to thank our customers for their continued favors and patronage given us in preference to those manufacturers only considerations of price or character Mr. Beecher so eloquently pleads for."

SCANLAN & COLBURN,

70 STATE-ST.

GYMNASIUM.

GYMNASIUM,

Library Hall Building.

AXLE GREASE.

FRAZER LUBRICATOR COMP'Y,

SUCCESSORS TO

FRAZER, SWIFT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF

FRAZER'S PATENT

LUBRICATOR

AND

AXLE GREASE.

10 STATE-ST., CHICAGO.

REMOVED.

REMOVAL.

L. A. Gurney, City and County Surveyor, and E. W. L. Gurney, Landscape Gardener, have removed to 79 Clark-st., corner Lake.

I. O. O. F.

I. O. O. F.

DRY GOODS.

NOTICE.

NEW ATTRACTIONS

AND

BARGAINS

AT

CARSON, PIRIE & CO.'S

GREAT SALE

THIS WEEK.

See advertisement in Monday's Tribune.

An extra force of salesmen has been engaged, so that there shall be no delay and inconvenience, as on last week.

118 & 120 State-st

REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE.

BY

D. COLE & SON,

Real Estate Agents,

No. 192 West Madison-st.

100 Residences, ranging from $1,000 to $65,000 each.

200 Lots, from $500 to $15,000 each.

Business Property on Halsted, Madison, Randolph, Canal, Washington, and various other streets.

Parties wishing to purchase Real Estate, improved or unimproved, will do well to examine our list.

D. COLE & SON.

CHEAP HOMES!

ATTENTION!

Beautiful Six-Room Cottages.

No Payment but $50 per Month, and No Interest.

High and dry Grove Lots, only $200 cash, with interest, and no money for two years. Right where the city is building. Call at Chicago Grove Lot Office.

FOR SALE.

Hotel and lot, No. 66 Wabash-av. Price, $35,000. Apply to

SHAFFNER & McDAID,

87 LaSalle-st.

We want an offer for the 44 6-10 feet of ground, east front, on the northwest corner of Michigan-av. and Fourteenth-st.

WM. FIELD, KING & CO.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A second supply of the

THE GALAXY

FOR FEBRUARY,

NOW READY.

The Galaxy is the most Beautiful, Brilliant, Entertaining, and Attractive Magazine

PUBLISHED IN THIS COUNTRY.

CONTENTS OF THE FEBRUARY NUMBER:

I. FOR TWENTY YEARS. By Mrs. Oliphant.

II. GLADYS THE HUNTRESS. By Mrs. Forrester.

III. THE BROOK. By Alfred Tennyson, D.C.L.

IV. THE STAGE IN ROME. Ancient Notes of Modern Theatres.

V. THE BROOK. Sequel. By Alfred Tennyson, D.C.L.

VI. THE PRINCE OF MANS. Book II. By the Author of "Ginx's Baby."

VII. LITERATURE AND WARFARE. By Justin McCarthy.

VIII. A LEGEND FROM ARDEN. By Mrs. E. M. Field.

IX. LIFE AND LETTERS FROM HAVANA. No. 2. By E. C. Kinney.

X. A LEGEND OF THE RHINE. By Mrs. E. M. Field.

XI. LITERATURE AND ART. I. Current French Literature. By Eugene Benson.

XII. LITERATURE AND ART. II. Contemporary English Literature. By Eugene Benson.

XIII. THE CHURCH. By Dr. Dollinger.

We have arranged with Messrs. Sheldon & Co. to furnish every gift, to start on receipt of an order. Send for circulars, &c., to

SHELDON & COMPANY,

498 and 500 Broadway, New York.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.

THE GALAXY IS THE BEST OF AMERICAN MAGAZINES.—Boston Post.

PRINTING.

Robert Fergus' Sons

Established 1840.

PRINTERS

Office,

14 CLARK ST.

Printing Room, 141 to 149 Illinois Street.

GYMNASIUM.

GYMNASIUM,

Library Hall Building.

LUMBER AND TIMBER.

LUMBER

AND TIMBER.

We are prepared to take orders for bills of lumber, to be sawed during the season, and from the mills of Gilbert & Sons, at Manistee, Mich.

Persons contemplating erecting buildings will find it to their advantage to call on us. Prices reduced. Estimates now ready for delivery.

Prompt shipments guaranteed, we own quantities of lumber now on wharf from our own mill.

BRADNER, CHARNLEY & CO.

Lumber Merchants,

248 South Water-st.

THE SKATING SEASON.

WEST SIDE RINK

OPEN AFTERNOON AND EVENING.

GOOD ICE. MUSIC EVERY NIGHT.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES.

COPARTNERSHIP.

TEA.

GREAT REDUCTION

IN PRICE OF

Pure Japan Teas.

MATZO, SUZUKI & CO.,

109 South Clark-st.

PATENTS.

The Summer and Winter Door & Blind Spring.

LOTTERY.

GOOD NEWS.

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE GREAT

MISSOURI STATE

SINGLE NUMBER LOTTERY

IS TO BE CONTINUED.

THE FIRST REGULAR LOTTERY

On the Havana Plan

WILL DRAW

Monday, Jan. 31, 1870,

1,190 PRIZES,

Amounting to $330,250

IN GOLD,

WITH A

Capital Prize of $50,000!

Whole Tickets, $12; Halves, $6; Quarters, $3; for which address

C. H. MURRAY & CO.,

No. 319 Olive-st., St. Louis, Mo.

Extra Class No. 138, for Jan. 24, 1870.

CAPITAL PRIZE, $50,000.

Whole Tickets, $12; Halves, $6; Quarters, $3.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

Address C. H. MURRAY & CO.,

No. 319 Olive-st., St. Louis, Mo.

BRICK MACHINE.

E. R. GARD,

PROPRIETOR OF THE

Gard Improved Brick Machine.

The Grandest Success of the Age.

Also manufactures the best Hand Press in use, and Brick Machinery complete. Is Chicago agent for The Chief Brick Machine, in Chicago alone, over forty millions of bricks.

Office and warehouse adjoining. E. R. GARD,

181 Clinton-st., Chicago, Ill.

FINANCIAL.

$12,000

WANTED for five years on choice improved property, South Side, valued at $25,000.

$10,000

WANTED for five years on choice unimproved property, South Side, value at $15,000.

$10,000

WANTED for five years on improved property, corner of Wabash-av. and Madison-st.

$3,000

WANTED for three years on unimproved property, South and West Sides.

Inquire at Office of N. PARKIN PIERCE, Real Estate Broker, 159 Dearborn-st.

FOR FOREIGN EXCHANGE

APPLY TO

HENRY GREENEBAUM & CO.,

BANKERS,

Corner Lake and LaSalle-sts.

Letters of Credit for Travellers issued, available throughout the World.

Commercial Credits opened to Importers on reasonable terms.

Fourth National Bank,

CORNER

Washington and Dearborn-sts.,

CHICAGO.

F. S. PEABODY, Pres't. E. G. TAYLOR, Vice Pres't. T. C. MAYO, Cashier.

National Bank of Commerce,

107 DEARBORN-ST.,

CHICAGO.

A. VANCE BROWN, President.

CHARLES T. DUKLEY, Cashier.

JOHN OTT, Assistant Cashier.

FINANCIAL.

We have money to loan in small amounts, for a short time, on approved security.

WM. FIELD, KING & CO.,

Basement, First National Bank building, entrance on Washington-st.

Merchants' Insurance Co. Stock.

70 Shares wanted by

SPEAR & DRIVER,

No. 121 LaSalle-st., Room 15.

WANTED.

A FIRST-CLASS PAPER RULER

WANTED.

At JOHN H. SMALL & CO.'S,

STATIONERS,

AND BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,

117 DEARBORN-ST.

SITUATION WANTED

BOOKKEEPER.

A young man of thorough business training, in one of these a situation either as bookkeeper, salesman, or in general office capacity. Can refer to N. PARKIN PIERCE, Real Estate Broker, 159 Dearborn-st., Room 3, or to Messrs. Hall, Goudy & Co., 107 Dearborn-st.

HOUSE WANTED

Immediately. A house with 10 to 12 rooms for a family of four adults. Address, stating rent, location, &c., "HOUSE," Box 5,741, Post-Office.

FURNITURE.

FASHIONABLE

FURNITURE.

Wm. W. Strong,

205 Randolph-st.

GYMNASIUM.

GYMNASIUM,

Library Hall Building.

FOR SALE.

FOR SALE,

Or Exchange for City Real Estate, A large plant of Machinery, Tools, &c., for the manufacture of Sash, Doors, Blinds, &c. Address R. K. FAYSON, Box 1,000, Post-Office.

TO RENT.

TO RENT,

Three Stores, 1, 3, 5 Market-st., close to Madison and Randolph-sts. Apply to KIRBY, CARPENTER & CO., 45 and 47 Wabash-av.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

BRADY'S TEMPLE OF ART,

120 Washington-st.

In THIS place to get Photographs made down to the present time.

CLOTHING.

From 1st January to 1st March,

AUCTION SALES.

(ESTABLISHED 1855.)

WM. A. BUTTERS & CO.,

Auctioneers,

S. E. S. AND 51 HANDOLPH-STS., CHICAGO, ILL.

Regular Trade Sales,

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, BOOTS, SHOES, &c., Every Tuesday and Thursday.

SUNDRIES, GOODS, Every Saturday.

Furniture Trade Sales.

Bedsteads, Card and Centre Tables, Bureaus, Parlor Suits, &c.,

AT AUCTION,

On WEDNESDAY, Jan. 26, at 9:30 o'clock,

At our Salesrooms, 45, 47 and 49 Randolph-st.

WM. A. BUTTERS & CO.

Dry Goods Trade Sale.

DRY GOODS,

Clothing, Hosiery, Gents' Furnishing Goods, Hats, Boots, Shoes, &c.,

At Auction, By Catalogue,

On THURSDAY, Jan. 27, at 9:30 o'clock,

At our Salesrooms, 45, 47 and 49 Randolph-st.

WM. A. BUTTERS & CO.

To the Retail Trade.

VERY CHOICE CHINA TEAS

(Imported by the "Pacific Mail Tea Co.," to be sold

AT AUCTION,

On FRIDAY, January 28, 1870,

BY WM. A. BUTTERS & CO.,

At 9, 45, and 51 Randolph-st., Chicago.

Without reserve, the entire stock of the Pacific Mail Tea Company, consisting of Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Japan, Oolong, English Breakfast, Powchong, Souchong, and Scented Teas, in Half Chests, Quarter Chests, Boxes, Caddies, and Packages.

By J. B. CHAMBERLIN & CO.

BANKRUPT SALE

OF A

Wholesale Stock of Wines and Liquors

(Receivable by Purchaser at Only)

AT THE LAKE-ST.

On TUESDAY, Jan. 25th, at 10 o'clock, a. m.

By D. LONG & Co.

Regular Wednesday's Sale

Of miscellaneous and auctioneering merchandise at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m.

At our Salesrooms, 45 and 47 Randolph-st.

By EDWARD F. THOMAS & CO.

CHATTEL MORTGAGE SALE

OF THE

Furniture and Effects of a Boarding House of 14 rooms, Whole of Bedding, Furniture, Tables, Crockery and Glassware, Plated and Cook Stoves, and other effects,

At Auction,

On THURSDAY, Jan. 27th, at 9:30 o'clock a. m.

At No. 112 Fifth-av., between Monroe and Adams-sts.

By H. T. LEE.

Administratrix Auction

OF

HOUSE FURNITURE.

At 9 o'clock a. m. and 2 p. m.

On SUNDAY, 23d inst., at 1 1-2 o'clock.

Parlor, Bedroom, Chamber, and Kitchen Furniture, Carpets, Stoves, Crockery, &c., at

No. 112 Fifth-av., between Monroe and Adams-sts.

GYMNASIUM.

GYMNASIUM,

Library Hall Building.

PROPOSALS.

SEALED PROPOSALS

will be received at the office of the Chief Quartermaster, Department of the Missouri, Chicago, Ill., until 12 o'clock m., Jan. 31, 1870, for furnishing MESQUAH.

AT PARWELL HALL.

On the evening of SATURDAY, Jan. 29, 1870, the Celebrated Lecturer and Author,

MRS. H. M. BALLOU,

Will lecture on "Mesquah, or Life Among the Indians."

PARWELL HALL.

OLD BULL

Will positively appear for the last time at PARWELL HALL, on SATURDAY EVENING, Jan. 29, 1870, at 8 o'clock. Tickets, 50 cents. Reserved seats, 75 cents. Tickets for sale at the door.

LIBRARY HALL.

Chicago Library Association

Miss ANNA E. DICKINSON

Will lecture on

"Whited Sepulchres and Sermon Life,"

On MONDAY, Jan. 24, 1870,

At 8 o'clock p. m.

Tickets, 50 cents. Reserved seats, 75 cents. Tickets for sale at the door.

CROSBY'S MUSIC HALL.

CALEDONIAN CLUB.

THE FIFTH ANNUAL BALL

OF THE C. C. C. WILL BE HELD AT CROSBY'S MUSIC HALL,

Tuesday Evening, Jan. 25.

DANCING ACADEMIES.

SOUTH SIDE—Cor. State and Randolph-sts.

WEST SIDE—Cor. Halsted and Adams-sts.

Private lessons at any hour. Circulars at the Academies.

PROF. D. H. SUTTENFIELD.

A. FISHER'S DANCING ACADEMY,

Nos. 142 and 144 North Clark-st.

LIBRARY HALL.

THURSDAY, Jan. 27, SATURDAY MORNING, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, and SATURDAY EVENING,

SKIFF, WHEELER, HORNA DRAYS

MINSTRELS,

In a Variety of Entertainments.

ORATORIO SOCIETY. ATTENTION!

A Rehearsal on MONDAY EVENING, at 7:30 o'clock, at Library Hall. Every member of the Class of '69 is requested to be present.

C. HARDMAN, Director.

JAMES BELLOIS,

THEATRICAL COSTUMER,

No. 72 South Clark-st., Chicago.

COSTUMES AND DRAPING DRESSES TO RENT,

AT THE OLD STAND,

No. 222 STATE-ST., No. 222.

GENERAL NOTICES.

Cranberry and Fruit Culture.

CASH PAID

For all kinds of Furniture, Carpets, Stoves, Clothing, Old Gold and Silver, Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry, and Musical Instruments of every description. Highest cash prices paid at

No. 84 South Clark-st.

INSTRUCTION

EUGENE BISSELL,

Professor of Elocution and Reading,

Will receive pupils at his residence, No. 1,000 Wabash-av.

AMUSEMENTS.

CROSBY'S OPERA HOUSE.

THE UNPRECEDENTED FURORE

Created by the thousand and one audiences of the last season of

LOTTA AS TOPSY,

IN THE DRAMATIZATION OF

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

Now commencing the fourth and last week of the unprecedented engagement, of the very successful

FOURTH AND LAST WEEK

Of the most wonderful success of the age,

LOTTA AS TOPSY,

LOTTA as the Old Slut Peter was

LOTTA as Miss Winkle and

LOTTA as Prince Dot,

LOTTA, in Fancy Dances,

LOTTA, in "Love Among the Lions,"

With the UNPRECEDENTED CAST and unprecedented success,

PEPINA,

Who will appear in the performance of

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

SPECIAL NOTICE OF PERFORMANCES.

McVICKER'S THEATRE.

Proprietorship of the Gentlemanly Gentleman, but most worthy

Mr. J. H. McVICKER,

Private Secretary, Mr. Frank Aiken.

Treasurer, Mr. Frank Hennessy.

Oh, Saturday, How You Can't?

All of whom are connected with the Original Dramatic Stock Company of Chicago.

McVICKER'S THEATRE.

Management of the Gentlemanly Gentleman,

Mr. J. H. McVICKER,

Assisted by the Gentlemanly Gentleman,

Mr. FRANK AIKEN,

In the Beautiful Comedy,

FRITZ,

Our Cousin German,

In which Mr. McVICKER, as a newly-married cockroach, will sing Songs, Dances, and Characteristic Scenes,

Introducing the Celebrated Cockroach Duet,

Captain Schmidt, Mr. McVICKER

Private Secretary Frey, Mr. Aiken

Yelling Act Presidency Down, Mr. Hennessy

Oh, Saturday, How You Can't! Mr. Hennessy

All of whom are connected with the Original Dramatic Stock Company of Chicago.

HAVLIN'S MUSEUM.

HAVLIN & ALLEN ..... Proprietors and Managers

MONDAY, January 24, at 2 o'clock,

THE GREAT

Manning's Minstrels.

Two performances of the celebrated organization,

TOM BAKER,

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 24,

TOMMY SULLY,

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 24,

Matinees and Matinees of Unequaled Excellence, Pleasant to the Least, by M. Knowles, Director.

UNDER THE LAMP-POST,

Cast in the full strength of the company.

Prof. D. H. SUTTENFIELD.

DEARBORN THEATRE.

MONDAY, January 24,

THE GREAT

Manning's Minstrels.

Two performances of the celebrated organization,

TOM BAKER,

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 24,

TOMMY SULLY,

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 24,

Matinees and Matinees of Unequaled Excellence, Pleasant to the Least, by M. Knowles, Director.

UNDER THE LAMP-POST,

Cast in the full strength of the company.

Prof. D. H. SUTTENFIELD.

AGENTS WANTED.

GYMNASIUM.

GYMNASIUM,

Library Hall Building.

DISSOLUTION NOTICES.

DISSOLUTION.

...ED LATEST MAINE TRAGEDY.

DRY GOODS.

ROSS & GOSSAGE,

AT THEIR GREAT

"CLOSING-OUT SALE,"

Are offering their ENTIRE STOCK of

Laces,
Embroideries,
Silks,
Dress Goods,
Shawls,
Cloaks,
Suits,
Blankets,
Flannels,
Linens, and Housekeeping Goods,

At a Reduction of

15 to 25 Per Cent,

And Below the Cost of Importation.

Rich Striped

SILKS & SATINS,

At 91 Per Yard,

REGULAR PRICE $1.

AT

106 & 108 State-st.,

AND

56 & 58 WASHINGTON-ST.

LADIES' FURNISHING GOODS

FIELD, LEITER & CO.

Have just received a full assortment of Needle-Wrought

CAMBRIC EDGINGS & INSERTINGS,

Plain and Embroidered

CAMBRIC SETS,

IN NEW DESIGNS.

A Full Line of

FOREIGN WHITE GOODS,

All their own Importation, and a new supply of Medium Quality and Fine White

FLANNELS,

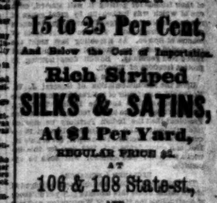
For Ladies' and Children's use, which they are offering at a large reduction from former prices.

State & Washington-sts.

RAILROADS.

Arrival and Departure of Trains.

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.



FASHION AND FASHIONS.

Some Thoughts on Woman.

Dress for Mourning.

Misdirected Sorrow.

Hoops.

The Misses of Little Tots.

Jewelry.

A Queer Wife.

Fashion and Extravagance.

Fashion and Loveliness.

Widows' Weeds.

Materials.

Bonnets and Hats.

Hair Nets.

Shoes and Gloves.

Jewelry.

Miscellaneous.

EDWIN M. STANTON.

THE DARWINIAN THEORY.

The Pope and His Visitors.

Philanthropy of an Indiana Agent.

The Women Who Knew in Court.

EDWIN M. STANTON.

THE DARWINIAN THEORY.

The Pope and His Visitors.

Philanthropy of an Indiana Agent.

The Women Who Knew in Court.

THE MAINE LAW OUTRAGE.

STREET-CAR OUTRAGES.

THE INFANT LAMB-LOVELESS.

RELIGIOUS.

Special and Regular Services in the Churches To-Day.

REAL ESTATE.

The Exposure of Taxes—The Decline in Sales—Real Estate Improvements—Prices—How for the Week.

COMMERCIAL.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK MARKET.

For the Week Ending January 22.

MARKETS BY TELEGRAPH.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

MONETARY.

MEDICAL CARDS.

MODERN

SPORTING MATTERS.

The Chicago Royal Hall Club, and Last Week's Assembly.

Skating Contest Between Chicago and Milwaukee Champions at the Rink.

The Rink Championship Billiard Match—The Prize Ring.

ROYAL HALL.

SKATING MATTERS.

THE SOCIETY DRAMA ASYLUM.

THE CITY IN BRIEF.

THE POLICE COURTS.

BILLIARDS.

PUGILISM.

THE TURF.

BOWLING.

YESTERDAY'S FIRES.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

MARRIED.

DIED.

INSTRUCTION.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

BOARDING AND ROOMING.

HELP WANTED—MALE.

HELP WANTED—FEMALE.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

BOARD WANTED.

SITUATIONS WANTED—MALE.

SITUATIONS WANTED—FEMALE.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—TO EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FINANCIAL.

CLAIRVOYANTS.

HORSES AND CARRIAGES.

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

TO RENT—ROOMS.

TO RENT—STORES AND OFFICES.

WANTED—TO RENT.

REAL ESTATE WANTED.

PARTNERS WANTED.

LOST AND FOUND.

FOR SALE.

PERSONAL.

SEWING MACHINES.

SUBURBAN REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

TO LEASE.

MACHINERY.

RAMBLES IN GERMANY.

Eisenach.

The Story of the Princess Elizabeth.

The Castle of the Wartburg.

Luther's Chamber.

From Coburg to Nuremberg.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

Leipsic, Sept. 26, 1869.

I REACH Eisenach a small city, a shade cleaner than most smaller towns in Germany; built on low ground indeed, but at the foot of several hills of respectable height. Driving in at an old arched gateway, a remnant of the ancient fortifications, and (through various narrow streets, I enter at last the "Half-Moon" Hotel, and finding myself uncommonly hungry, dine at once on table d'hote, partaking of which, in general I strongly object in. Dinner over, I step awhile on the sofa in my room; finally tired of doing nothing I amuse myself, look out of the window at the Wartburg, away up to eward the skies, and resolve to go up there forthwith.

NOTE, As explained in my last, I am of an unusual turn of mind, have a special repugnance to the hard facts of well ascertained history, and a much greater liking for myths, legends, yarns, or anything hovering midway between truth and fiction. Hence, the Wartburg interested me less on account of the solid reality that I saw once perched there, than the somewhat airy and mythical tale of the holy St. Elizabeth and the contest of the Minnesingers.

Elizabeth, as the story runs, was a Hungarian Princess, who journeyed to carry her, with the Landgrave Hermann, Count of Thuringia, to the Wartburg was, from 1070-90, the residence of the Thuringian Counts, and was, at the same time, the favorite castle of the Minnesingers. The famous poetical strife of the Minnesingers. The popular account connects, also, the surrounding with the Wartburg. The mountainous hill in the immediate vicinity of the Wartburg, in the innermost depths of which, according to local reputation, Venus holds court with mysterious and weird orgies. One of the Minnesingers, Heinrich von Ofterdingen, otherwise known as Tannhauser, was unlucky enough here to incur the displeasure of Venus, where he remained a year, a captive to the allurements of the goddess. At last, breaking loose, he reappeared in the society which he had left, and took part in the lyrical contest. The subject of the entire was "Mines," or Love. Tannhauser advocated the claims of earthly or sensual; the others,—with Wolfram von Eschenbach at their head,—of divine and spiritual love. The dispute waxed warm, and Tannhauser, thrown off his guard by excitement, let slip a hint of his experience here but lately in the mysterious recesses of the Venusberg. The guests were horrified, and the knight, shaking themselves and the occasion loathful by one mere statement to his knightly vows and professions as a Minnesinger, were about to put him to death on the spot, when the Princess herself in despair at the fate of the Countess Elizabeth, who took his part, interceded for him, and saved his life; but to so deep an excommunication of the Church was he cast out, who, declaring that she was in league with the devotees of universal pleasure, gave herself wholly and heartily from that moment to the service of Mercy, entered a convent and spent the remainder of her short life in the strictest seclusion, in acts of devotion and charity. She died soon afterward, and received after death the greatest reverence as a saint; pilgrimages came from all parts to visit her grave, and the church which bears her name, the chief ornament of Marburg and one of the finest existing specimens of the pure Gothic architecture, was erected on the spot.

The Castle of the Wartburg itself was built in 1070 by Ludwig the Leaper, and was the residence of the Counts of Thuringia until the line became extinct, which was in 1440. It belongs now, together with the city of Eisenach, to the Duke of Weimar. It has been in a greatly ruined condition, but was restored in the most pregnant manner, and with the utmost fidelity to the ancient plan, in 1841. It stands on the summit of a steep hill, 600 feet above the city of Eisenach. Although very small, it covers the top of the hill completely, and must have been in the olden times a strong fortress.

Twenty minutes' climbing, up a shaded, winding foot-path, brings me to the top. On a little open space before the gate stand some specimens of early artillery,—mortals scarcely larger than those of an old-fashioned soldiers' musket, although considerably longer, and carrying a ball at the utmost but twenty times than a pistol-bullet; over, of mediæval carriages, and pointing menacingly toward the entrance. I doubt not they looked very formidable once.

The gate at one end of the long, irregular line of buildings is in the form of a pointed Gothic arch, very low and narrow. The moat and draw-bridge whom cause it, are so small that one invades rather of a toy-mortal than of an actual mediæval castle. Going through the passage, we come into the first court, which is so very narrow that it is itself hardly more than a passage-way. The buildings on either side are mere subsidiary structures, built of a frame work of wooden beams, filled up with unbaked bricks. The second court is much larger; this is, as usual in the case, is the main court of the castle. In the latter latticed corner or the left, as you approach it, is the entrance to the Landgrave's Residence, under a low, square tower. The rear side of the court are left open; that is, protected only by a wall. The left side is occupied by the imposing mass of the building of the castle proper.

Directed for admittance to the fine inn and restaurant outside the castle walls at the right, I find there other arrangements for the evening, and a party is soon made up. The Duke, who likes to live on the Wartburg in summer, was residing there at the time; hence some of the rooms were closed, but we saw all of any historical interest. The guide conducted us first to the mentioned building. No pains or expense have been spared in the restoration of these apartments and the walls have been decorated, perhaps not in the best taste, with well executed frescoes, representing various incidents in the history of the living and the more remote residents of the castle. Entering by a small door at the corner, we pass first into a long corridor, running the entire length of the building. Here are a series of frescoes representing the life of St. Elizabeth; her arrival at the Wartburg when quite young; her marriage; the first separation from her husband, from home, her death in the monastery. From this corridor one enters, at the farther end, the chapel, another long, narrow room, which is now occasionallypied. Next the chapel is the "Singers Hall," but very large, with an alcove and raised platform at one end, and a large painting which represents the scene of the contest which took place here. Connected with this room by a low doorway is the official reception room of the Grand Council. The furniture here and in all the apartments is either original or carefully imitated from ancient models. The walls have been decorated with pictures of the discovery of the Aula, building or the castle, etc. Above, occupying the entire largest floor of the building, is the finest room of all—the so-called banquet-hall. It is not, after all, so very large, and is rather low, but the rich carving on the beams, ceiling, and frescoes, and the imposition, and the exquisite taste shown in the arrangement of the whole, render the entire effect very fine. Floor and wainscoting are of dark wood, finely polished, but the light from windows on three sides prevents any gloominess. Here also are a few articles of furniture of the time, and some old weapons and armor, etc. The other rooms we saw in this part of the castle were of less interest; only the arms-chamber, with the weapons and equipments of a long line of Counts, deserves mention. In quite another part, near the castle-gate, is the room where Luther resided in 1521-22, and worked at his Bible-translation. It is a little, meanly furnished upper chamber, with a single small window. Thing chairs, bedstead, book-case, remain precisely as they were when the intrepid reformer left them, and visitors have made out have with the edges of the same. I sat in the rude straight-backed chair, with a seat about the width of the top board of a plain form, and found it very uncomfortable. Various relics of Luther—books, autographs, portraits, etc.—are preserved here. It is sure that the great reformer is said to have thrown the inkstand at the evil one, and a great spot is visible on the wall, quite decided as plaster, reported to be the place where the inkstand struck. The guide assured us that such was the history of the case; personally I am inclined to suspect he has been to keep any plaster on the place, and that it had been plastered, and, I dare say, raked over, a good many times since 1521.

I ascended to the Wartburg again the next morning, when I had more time to examine the exterior of the building, the fine view from the fortifications, and to admire the prospect, which, in every direction, seems to involve itself in a wilderness of mountains. Directly opposite the gate, on the farther side of the valley, is the Hoerselberg, with other hills, at the north with a little level flats between, in which the Unstrut flows; toward the east, a bare rocky hill at the other side of a deep valley, through which a railroad passes; on the face of the rocks an inscription in Roman across at one, painted to indicate the so-called Martinsfelsen, which is to be seen on the hill; on the south and west hourly-rounded hills, the beginning of the Thuringian forest.

I descended from the Wartburg, by a charming bridle-path, which I followed a little past Eisenach. Entering down the hill, and leaving gradually every trace of the city, which almost disappeared in the valley of the Wartburg, near and distant, and lost verdure and beauty of view. It seems as if I could never tire of looking at the hill. Ludwig the Leaper evidently knew what he was about when he chose such a lovely place for his residence, and the Minnesingers have not belied it, I know not why, but I never have been so charmed by a spot. I spent the whole afternoon in the neighborhood, lying about on the shaded banks I could find, diving into all the cool valleys, and climbing half the hills in sight, and returned to get some tea at Wartburg. I have every spent a pleasanter day.

On my way from Eisenach to Nuremberg, I stopped one day at Coburg, chiefly on account of the view from the fortress said to be extraordinarily fine, and in which I was not disappointed. From Coburg to Nuremberg, the road, which is itself on high ground, and is at times between ranges of hills, is in sight of mountains on three sides almost the entire distance.

The other rooms we saw in this part of the castle were of less interest; only the arms-chamber, with the weapons and equipments of a long line of Counts, deserves mention. In quite another part, near the castle-gate, is the room where Luther resided in 1521-22, and worked at his Bible-translation. It is a little, meanly furnished upper chamber, with a single small window. Thing chairs, bedstead, book-case, remain precisely as they were when the intrepid reformer left them, and visitors have made out have with the edges of the same. I sat in the rude straight-backed chair, with a seat about the width of the top board of a plain form, and found it very uncomfortable. Various relics of Luther—books, autographs, portraits, etc.—are preserved here. It is sure that the great reformer is said to have thrown the inkstand at the evil one, and a great spot is visible on the wall, quite decided as plaster, reported to be the place where the inkstand struck. The guide assured us that such was the history of the case; personally I am inclined to suspect he has been to keep any plaster on the place, and that it had been plastered, and, I dare say, raked over, a good many times since 1521.

I ascended to the Wartburg again the next morning, when I had more time to examine the exterior of the building, the fine view from the fortifications, and to admire the prospect, which, in every direction, seems to involve itself in a wilderness of mountains. Directly opposite the gate, on the farther side of the valley, is the Hoerselberg, with other hills, at the north with a little level flats between, in which the Unstrut flows; toward the east, a bare rocky hill at the other side of a deep valley, through which a railroad passes; on the face of the rocks an inscription in Roman across at one, painted to indicate the so-called Martinsfelsen, which is to be seen on the hill; on the south and west hourly-rounded hills, the beginning of the Thuringian forest.

I descended from the Wartburg, by a charming bridle-path, which I followed a little past Eisenach. Entering down the hill, and leaving gradually every trace of the city, which almost disappeared in the valley of the Wartburg, near and distant, and lost verdure and beauty of view. It seems as if I could never tire of looking at the hill. Ludwig the Leaper evidently knew what he was about when he chose such a lovely place for his residence, and the Minnesingers have not belied it, I know not why, but I never have been so charmed by a spot. I spent the whole afternoon in the neighborhood, lying about on the shaded banks I could find, diving into all the cool valleys, and climbing half the hills in sight, and returned to get some tea at Wartburg. I have every spent a pleasanter day.

On my way from Eisenach to Nuremberg, I stopped one day at Coburg, chiefly on account of the view from the fortress said to be extraordinarily fine, and in which I was not disappointed. From Coburg to Nuremberg, the road, which is itself on high ground, and is at times between ranges of hills, is in sight of mountains on three sides almost the entire distance. The country line spread out like a map. To the west the Hohburg Castle, and beyond, the rich line of the Rhine; to the southwest, the Taunus Mountains (Glockner) near Homburg; north, the Thuringian forest with its highest peak, Schneekopf; east, Frankenwald, and the Fichtelgebirge, at a great distance, with many hills and several cities and churches; lower, many towns of Franconia, with their churches and castles, and with wood and, and sprinkled with summer villas. The scene is one to remember. As I was there, having been in much too many rooms to remember, I could not find time for a visit to the castle, which is said to be in good preservation, and contains many relics of Luther. I was told that the Duke of Coburg-Gotha, who lives in the castle, was then in residence, but I could not find time for a visit to the castle. The residence palace is on edge of the town, near the public square, and—looking.

From Coburg it is an easy ride to Nuremberg, which I reached in the afternoon. I arrived in Nuremberg, and found it a fine old city, with many points of interest, and with many narrow streets and gloomy churches or cathedrals. So I was told, and I suppose it is true; that it was the centre of the Middle Ages; that it was prosperous and rich in Germany; that it was the seat of the cradle of the Reformation; that it was the birthplace of Albert Durer; that it has preserved more of the old architecture than any other city in Europe, etc. Nuremberg is a fine city, and I am glad I saw it, but I am not a student, too late in point of time for the Middle Ages, and too much of the present age, looking at the curiosities of this in half of Nuremberg.—and I suppose Nurnberg have I ever been so much in the presence of the past. It was the imagination to fancy myself four hundred years ago—surrounded by citizens of the period, in their costumes, their habits, and peculiarly-built houses, covered with the rust of centuries, and of the primitive manners of the time. The great events yet unaffected (at least, only to a modern investigator and mere observer) as the subject) failing a little among the petty interests of the present. I found myself, look out of the window at the Wartburg, away up to eward the skies, and resolve to go up there forthwith.

NOTE, As explained in my last, I am of an unusual turn of mind, have a special repugnance to the hard facts of well ascertained history, and a much greater liking for myths, legends, yarns, or anything hovering midway between truth and fiction. Hence, the Wartburg interested me less on account of the solid reality that I saw once perched there, than the somewhat airy and mythical tale of the holy St. Elizabeth and the contest of the Minnesingers.

Elizabeth, as the story runs, was a Hungarian Princess, who journeyed to carry her, with the Landgrave Hermann, Count of Thuringia, to the Wartburg was, from 1070-90, the residence of the Thuringian Counts, and was, at the same time, the favorite castle of the Minnesingers. The famous poetical strife of the Minnesingers. The popular account connects, also, the surrounding with the Wartburg. The mountainous hill in the immediate vicinity of the Wartburg, in the innermost depths of which, according to local reputation, Venus holds court with mysterious and weird orgies. One of the Minnesingers, Heinrich von Ofterdingen, otherwise known as Tannhauser, was unlucky enough here to incur the displeasure of Venus, where he remained a year, a captive to the allurements of the goddess. At last, breaking loose, he reappeared in the society which he had left, and took part in the lyrical contest. The subject of the entire was "Mines," or Love. Tannhauser advocated the claims of earthly or sensual; the others,—with Wolfram von Eschenbach at their head,—of divine and spiritual love. The dispute waxed warm, and Tannhauser, thrown off his guard by excitement, let slip a hint of his experience here but lately in the mysterious recesses of the Venusberg. The guests were horrified, and the knight, shaking themselves and the occasion loathful by one mere statement to his knightly vows and professions as a Minnesinger, were about to put him to death on the spot, when the Princess herself in despair at the fate of the Countess Elizabeth, who took his part, interceded for him, and saved his life; but to so deep an excommunication of the Church was he cast out, who, declaring that she was in league with the devotees of universal pleasure, gave herself wholly and heartily from that moment to the service of Mercy, entered a convent and spent the remainder of her short life in the strictest seclusion, in acts of devotion and charity. She died soon afterward, and received after death the greatest reverence as a saint; pilgrimages came from all parts to visit her grave, and the church which bears her name, the chief ornament of Marburg and one of the finest existing specimens of the pure Gothic architecture, was erected on the spot.

The Castle of the Wartburg itself was built in 1070 by Ludwig the Leaper, and was the residence of the Counts of Thuringia until the line became extinct, which was in 1440. It belongs now, together with the city of Eisenach, to the Duke of Weimar. It has been in a greatly ruined condition, but was restored in the most pregnant manner, and with the utmost fidelity to the ancient plan, in 1841. It stands on the summit of a steep hill, 600 feet above the city of Eisenach. Although very small, it covers the top of the hill completely, and must have been in the olden times a strong fortress.

Twenty minutes' climbing, up a shaded, winding foot-path, brings me to the top. On a little open space before the gate stand some specimens of early artillery,—mortals scarcely larger than those of an old-fashioned soldiers' musket, although considerably longer, and carrying a ball at the utmost but twenty times than a pistol-bullet; over, of mediæval carriages, and pointing menacingly toward the entrance. I doubt not they looked very formidable once.

The gate at one end of the long, irregular line of buildings is in the form of a pointed Gothic arch, very low and narrow. The moat and draw-bridge whom cause it, are so small that one invades rather of a toy-mortal than of an actual mediæval castle. Going through the passage, we come into the first court, which is so very narrow that it is itself hardly more than a passage-way. The buildings on either side are mere subsidiary structures, built of a frame work of wooden beams, filled up with unbaked bricks. The second court is much larger; this is, as usual in the case, is the main court of the castle. In the latter latticed corner or the left, as you approach it, is the entrance to the Landgrave's Residence, under a low, square tower. The rear side of the court are left open; that is, protected only by a wall. The left side is occupied by the imposing mass of the building of the castle proper.

Directed for admittance to the fine inn and restaurant outside the castle walls at the right, I find there other arrangements for the evening, and a party is soon made up. The Duke, who likes to live on the Wartburg in summer, was residing there at the time; hence some of the rooms were closed, but we saw all of any historical interest. The guide conducted us first to the mentioned building. No pains or expense have been spared in the restoration of these apartments and the walls have been decorated, perhaps not in the best taste, with well executed frescoes, representing various incidents in the history of the living and the more remote residents of the castle. Entering by a small door at the corner, we pass first into a long corridor, running the entire length of the building. Here are a series of frescoes representing the life of St. Elizabeth; her arrival at the Wartburg when quite young; her marriage; the first separation from her husband, from home, her death in the monastery. From this corridor one enters, at the farther end, the chapel, another long, narrow room, which is now occasionallypied. Next the chapel is the "Singers Hall," but very large, with an alcove and raised platform at one end, and a large painting which represents the scene of the contest which took place here. Connected with this room by a low doorway is the official reception room of the Grand Council. The furniture here and in all the apartments is either original or carefully imitated from ancient models. The walls have been decorated with pictures of the discovery of the Aula, building or the castle, etc. Above, occupying the entire largest floor of the building, is the finest room of all—the so-called banquet-hall. It is not, after all, so very large, and is rather low, but the rich carving on the beams, ceiling, and frescoes, and the imposition, and the exquisite taste shown in the arrangement of the whole, render the entire effect very fine. Floor and wainscoting are of dark wood, finely polished, but the light from windows on three sides prevents any gloominess. Here also are a few articles of furniture of the time, and some old weapons and armor, etc. The other rooms we saw in this part of the castle were of less interest; only the arms-chamber, with the weapons and equipments of a long line of Counts, deserves mention. In quite another part, near the castle-gate, is the room where Luther resided in 1521-22, and worked at his Bible-translation. It is a little, meanly furnished upper chamber, with a single small window. Thing chairs, bedstead, book-case, remain precisely as they were when the intrepid reformer left them, and visitors have made out have with the edges of the same. I sat in the rude straight-backed chair, with a seat about the width of the top board of a plain form, and found it very uncomfortable. Various relics of Luther—books, autographs, portraits, etc.—are preserved here. It is sure that the great reformer is said to have thrown the inkstand at the evil one, and a great spot is visible on the wall, quite decided as plaster, reported to be the place where the inkstand struck. The guide assured us that such was the history of the case; personally I am inclined to suspect he has been to keep any plaster on the place, and that it had been plastered, and, I dare say, raked over, a good many times since 1521.

I ascended to the Wartburg again the next morning, when I had more time to examine the exterior of the building, the fine view from the fortifications, and to admire the prospect, which, in every direction, seems to involve itself in a wilderness of mountains. Directly opposite the gate, on the farther side of the valley, is the Hoerselberg, with other hills, at the north with a little level flats between, in which the Unstrut flows; toward the east, a bare rocky hill at the other side of a deep valley, through which a railroad passes; on the face of the rocks an inscription in Roman across at one, painted to indicate the so-called Martinsfelsen, which is to be seen on the hill; on the south and west hourly-rounded hills, the beginning of the Thuringian forest.

I descended from the Wartburg, by a charming bridle-path, which I followed a little past Eisenach. Entering down the hill, and leaving gradually every trace of the city, which almost disappeared in the valley of the Wartburg, near and distant, and lost verdure and beauty of view. It seems as if I could never tire of looking at the hill. Ludwig the Leaper evidently knew what he was about when he chose such a lovely place for his residence, and the Minnesingers have not belied it, I know not why, but I never have been so charmed by a spot. I spent the whole afternoon in the neighborhood, lying about on the shaded banks I could find, diving into all the cool valleys, and climbing half the hills in sight, and returned to get some tea at Wartburg. I have every spent a pleasanter day.

On my way from Eisenach to Nuremberg, I stopped one day at Coburg, chiefly on account of the view from the fortress said to be extraordinarily fine, and in which I was not disappointed. From Coburg to Nuremberg, the road, which is itself on high ground, and is at times between ranges of hills, is in sight of mountains on three sides almost the entire distance. The country line spread out like a map. To the west the Hohburg Castle, and beyond, the rich line of the Rhine; to the southwest, the Taunus Mountains (Glockner) near Homburg; north, the Thuringian forest with its highest peak, Schneekopf; east, Frankenwald, and the Fichtelgebirge, at a great distance, with many hills and several cities and churches; lower, many towns of Franconia, with their churches and castles, and with wood and, and sprinkled with summer villas. The scene is one to remember. As I was there, having been in much too many rooms to remember, I could not find time for a visit to the castle, which is said to be in good preservation, and contains many relics of Luther. I was told that the Duke of Coburg-Gotha, who lives in the castle, was then in residence, but I could not find time for a visit to the castle. The residence palace is on edge of the town, near the public square, and—looking.

From Coburg it is an easy ride to Nuremberg, which I reached in the afternoon. I arrived in Nuremberg, and found it a fine old city, with many points of interest, and with many narrow streets and gloomy churches or cathedrals. So I was told, and I suppose it is true; that it was the centre of the Middle Ages; that it was prosperous and rich in Germany; that it was the seat of the cradle of the Reformation; that it was the birthplace of Albert Durer; that it has preserved more of the old architecture than any other city in Europe, etc. Nuremberg is a fine city, and I am glad I saw it, but I am not a student, too late in point of time for the Middle Ages, and too much of the present age, looking at the curiosities of this in half of Nuremberg.—and I suppose Nurnberg have I ever been so much in the presence of the past. It was the imagination to fancy myself four hundred years ago—surrounded by citizens of the period, in their costumes, their habits, and peculiarly-built houses, covered with the rust of centuries, and of the primitive manners of the time. The great events yet unaffected (at least, only to a modern investigator and mere observer) as the subject) failing a little among the petty interests of the present. I found myself

CRIME.

From the London Daily News.

The symptomatic tendencies of the times keep our whole country agitated with the question of crime. Whether there are really more crimes committed than formerly, what has been recently called the "increase of crime" is, after all, only the increase of crime as now recorded. Increasing Gospel light, increasing facilities for the detection of crime, increasing interest in the moral and physical welfare of the criminal classes, and increasing facilities for the publication of crime, all tend to swell the apparent amount of crime. As far as I can see, this is the case. Whether there be more crime or not, there is more attention paid to it than formerly, and more is known about it. Take, for instance, the history of the Bristol Lynch, which appears to have been a very bad case, and which, as it is said to have been perpetrated by a mob of boys, is all the more remarkable. Strange to say, my difficulties in getting information about it were very great. I applied to the Director of Criminal Statistics, to the Secretary of the Home Office, to the Chief Constable of Bristol, and to the Governor of the Bristol Gaol, and from each of them I received the same answer, that they had no information on the subject. Now, I am not blaming these gentlemen for not having information which they had not got, but I do blame the system which makes it impossible for them to get it. Strange to say, my difficulties in getting information about it were very great. I applied to the Director of Criminal Statistics, to the Secretary of the Home Office, to the Chief Constable of Bristol, and to the Governor of the Bristol Gaol, and from each of them I received the same answer, that they had no information on the subject. Now, I am not blaming these gentlemen for not having information which they had not got, but I do blame the system which makes it impossible for them to get it. Strange to say, my difficulties in getting information about it were very great. I applied to the Director of Criminal Statistics, to the Secretary of the Home Office, to the Chief Constable of Bristol, and to the Governor of the Bristol Gaol, and from each of them I received the same answer, that they had no information on the subject. Now, I am not blaming these gentlemen for not having information which they had not got, but I do blame the system which makes it impossible for them to get it.

The Story of the Head Article Who Doesn't Come to Grief.

BY MARK TWAIN.

Once there was a boy named Hans who lived in the mountains of Germany, and he was very poor, and had to work hard for his living. He was a kind, gentle boy, and honest and industrious, and had a good character, but in spite of all this he was very poor, and had to work hard for his living. He was a kind, gentle boy, and honest and industrious, and had a good character, but in spite of all this he was very poor, and had to work hard for his living.

A PLACE FOR "BARBAITE."

A CHEAP STORE

THE AMERICAN BONAPARTE.

A DIAMOND MATCH

TACKLING OLD SPERATE.

ORDER.

MARRIED IN GERMANY.

Stockholm.

The Story of the Princess Elizabeth.

The Castle of the Wartburg.

Luther's Chamber.

THE CHICAGO

The Tribune.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 23, 1870

THE LAST SHOT FIRED AT DONELSON.

An Incident of the War.

BY GENERAL ALEXIS SMITH.

From The Chicago Tribune.

One bright, sunshiny morning, on the banner part of February, 1862, the decks of the beautiful steamer Tigress, of Cincinnati, were cleared for action. Just as she struck the chief of Tobacco-Port out in the bosom of the Pacific ocean, to the "Father of the Waters." The vivid, gossipy, gurgling thread, the gay, in fact, Coast Guard fleet, lashed the scene into white-caps on the surface, leaving a wake of whirling foam on the bosom of the water, and, finally, the Admiral, the Commodore of the squadron, and the Captain of the Tigress, with a number of officers and marines, stood on the deck of the steamer, and looked down upon the fleet of gunboats that lay in the harbor, ready for the fray.

The Admiral was a veteran of the old school, a thorough disciplinarian, and a brave and gallant officer. He was a strong man, a former resident of Illinois, who had risen from the ranks of the army to the command of a fleet of gunboats.

The Commodore was a young man, who had served in the navy for many years, and had seen much service on the Mississippi river.

The Captain of the Tigress was a young officer, who had been in the service but a few years, and was ambitious to distinguish himself on this occasion.

The Admiral was a man of few words, and he spoke but few on this occasion, after we entered the harbor. "Now then, gentlemen," he said, "we must clear for action. Let us be ready for the fight, and we will whip the rebels out of their boots in short order."

"Aye, aye, sir," was the reply, "I should know how to fight on the smallest deck."

Bringing his head, and looking to the shore, he carefully surveyed the situation, and then, with a sigh of satisfaction, he said, "Well, gentlemen, I think we have a fine day for the fight, and I hope we shall have a glorious victory. Commodore, you will take command of the fleet, and I will remain on board the Tigress, and direct the movements of the land forces. Captain, you will see that your men are ready for action, and that the guns are properly manned. Gentlemen, to your posts."

The Admiral was a man of few words, and when he spoke he was obeyed. The officers left the deck, and in a few minutes the Tigress was ready for action.

The Admiral and Commodore were in their boats, and the fleet was under way. The Admiral's boat was in front, and the Commodore's boat was close behind the Tigress. The fleet was in line of battle, and the Tigress was in the center.

The Admiral's boat was manned by a crew of twelve men, and the Commodore's boat was manned by a crew of ten men. The Admiral's boat was in charge of a lieutenant, and the Commodore's boat was in charge of a midshipman.

The Admiral's boat was a large, fine boat, and was well adapted to the service for which it was intended. It was a boat that could be rowed with great speed, and it was a boat that could be handled with great ease. It was a boat that could be turned in any direction with great rapidity, and it was a boat that could be stopped in a moment.

The Commodore's boat was a small, light boat, and was well adapted to the service for which it was intended. It was a boat that could be rowed with great speed, and it was a boat that could be handled with great ease. It was a boat that could be turned in any direction with great rapidity, and it was a boat that could be stopped in a moment.